Reading Forward needs 349.6 tutor hours a week this year, £10,380 more than the provisional budget

On the October census, 874 Year 7 students join Reading Forward: their reading at the start of Year 7 is below 85 on the Lexis basis. At 0.4 hours a week each that is 349.6 tutor hours a week, £349,880 for the 36 weeks at £27.80 an hour, against the provisional £339,500 approved in July (range 843 to 915 students, £337,470 to £366,293, from re-estimating the conversions).

Source: census of 1 October 2026; Lexis, Quill and Brightway results to 30 September; KS2 2026.

Each academy's own test gives 784 students, 90 fewer. Quill's standardised scores come from a softer 2024 sample, so a Quill 85 is a Lexis 79.8 and the Quill academies' own lists miss 99 students. The Brightway academies' own lists run 46 high, but their Lexis trial was a second sitting for most students and ran 3.6 points above a first sitting; taken back, a Brightway 85 is a Lexis 87.3. The July transition-day Lexis results stand 4.0 points above the start of Year 7 and are brought down by it, which adds 37 students at the four July academies.

Conversions to the Lexis basis, Quill and Brightway: 70: 69.8 and 71.7; 75: 72.1 and 79.3; 80: 74.9 and 83.2; 85: 79.8 and 87.3; 90: 85.8 and 91.7; 95: 91.9 and 95.9.

Students without a valid sitting by the census are placed on their KS2 reading; those with neither are assessed on arrival and are not in these numbers. Places are confirmed to families by each academy after this note.
